The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 15.

From the (London) Oracle.

GENERAL SUWARROW,

Who has by this time assumed the chief command of the allied army in Italy, is one of the most singular military characters of this or any other age. He is now somewhat of an advanced age; but years have neither diminished the vigor of his body or the power of his mind.

The qualities which distinguish this extraordinary man as highly consistent with the most elevated genius, and the superiority and energy of talents in that species of warfare in which he has been generally engaged. The indiscriminate slaughter of the garrison and inhabitants of Ishmael, was in a great measure produced by the inexorable cruelty which the Turks exercised on the Russians, at that time, whenever they had them in their power.

Suwarrow was then under the command of Prince Potemkin, who arrived before Ishmael, and who, thought the place was very strongly fortified, and defended by a very numerous garrison, knew the character of his comrade so well, that, pointing to the place, all the orders he gave him were—"Allez prendre cette ville!"—"Go and take that town!"

Suwarrow, without hesitation, assembled his division.—"You see (said he) that large town, and I now give it to you, with every thing that it contains—but we must first take it!" The general then led his hardy Russians to the assault, when they met with so obstinate and fierce a resistance on the part of the Turks, as inflamed their valour into fury. The town, however, was taken by storm; and such was the exasperated rage of the assailants, that they indiscriminately massacred every being they met with.

There was, however, a very singular exception to this slaughter. Several hundred persons had taken refuge in a Mosque, where the conquerors were entering, when a Turkish Priest implored their clemency. The furious Russians immediately paid respect to the sanctity of the place, and spared the lives of the trembling wretches it contained, at the same time that, after destroying upwards of thirty thousand human beings, they were satiating their rage even on the dogs and cats which they found in the streets or houses.

That war being concluded, Suwarrow had a respite until the final partition of Poland called him again into action. This is not an occasion for delivering an opinion on the morality of that proceeding; but surely no event ever furnished a display of more valour or military talents, than this general shewed in conducting the operations of that conclusive campaign.

Kosciusko, entrenched under the walls of Warsaw, not only baffled the efforts of the the king of Prussia, but forced him to fly with his 60,000 chosen troops. The patriot then considered the field as his own, when the arrival of Suwarrow, with only 12000 Russians, changed the aspect of affairs;—the triumph of the Poles was at an end—their king dethroned—their army destroyed—and their general made prisoner.

It is well known that Suwarrow was desirous of following up those successes by vigorous operations against France, and compelled the king of Prussia to re-enter into the General Confederacy. In the first blaze of the French Revolution, Suwarrow declared to the Empress, as well as to the foreign ministers at Petersbugh, that if he were placed at the head of 100,000 Russians, he would engage—with his head—to restore the monarchy, or to lay all France in ashes. It is by no means impossible that at that time he would have been able to effect what he promised, but even now great expectations may be formed from the appearance of such a warrior upon the field of action. The great danger to be apprehended is in the jealousy of the Austrian generals, who may spurn at being placed under the command of a stranger, and the perfidy of the staff officers, the greatest part of whom are more than supposed to have been corrupted by the gold of Buonaparte.

At all events, the first action between the Russians and the French, is likely to be decisive of the fate of Italy. Should the latter be defeated, there is little probability that a man of them will escape. The Cossacs who constantly attend the Russian armies, and who are the more attached to Suwarrow, as from experience they have the strongest confidence of his success, are amongst the fiercest people on the globe.—They consist of hardy tribes of Tarters, whose custom is to rush in upon a broken enemy, and who have no conception of any thing like quarter. They are extremely well mounted on strong and swift horses, bearing lances couched as in the days of ancient chivalry, and drive with such impetuosity, as with ease to list a hussar from his horse. It is however worthy of remark, that the delicious climate of Italy has always been found to invigorate rather than enervate the frames of those frosty children of the North—a circumstance which calls to mind the exquisite fragment of our poet Gray, in describing the incursions of the Northern Conquerors into that charming conntry:

"With grim delight the hordes of ocean view.
"A brighter day and skies of azure blue;
"Scent the sweet fragrance of the opening rose,
"And quaff the pendant vintage as it grows."

At the age of 65, of a body very thin, and a constitution, in appearance, very feeble, Suwarrow nevertheless is full of strength and activity, insensible to the inclemency of seasons, the variety of climates, and the fatigues of the rude occupation of war. For all these physical advantages, he is indebted to his strictly sober mode of living, and the extreme simplicity of his manners. In the country the plainest cottage serves him instead of a palace, and his bed is a bundle of straw. The most common aliments, without much cookery, are his constant diet. Born of a distinguished family, and in the bosom of enjoyments, it is from moral principles, and to fit himself for the military profession, that he has habituated himself to that austerity of manners which belong to Stoicism, and that he has early banished from him all enjoyments, and luxury, and every kind of pleasure. Brought up amongst the din of arms, having passed his whole life in the midst of battles, endowed with an ardent soul, a just mind, an enterprising character, a generous heart, an elevated genius, equally inaccessible to favour and to fear, he is firm in the resolution which he once takes, after convincing himself that it is the best. In entering upon the career of arms, he cultivated his military taste and talents, by a profound study, and serious meditation, on the campaigns of the greatest warriors, ancient and modern. No man retains so lively a recollection of those famous aad instructive events which have passed in the different theatres of war. More philosophical than the greater part of Warriors, he has felt the disadvantages which automation, and consequently unempassioned troops must experience, when opposed to such as are animated by great sentiments, by exalted imaginations, and by prestigies proper to excite their ardour for the interest of general and individual order. This it was which prejudiced him so much against the Prussian tactics; and thus he does not confine himself to those exercises only, which gives the activity to troops, but employs himself particularly on the spirit of the army. For this purpose he avails himself of all the means and resources which his genius can supply, the knowledge of the characters of individuals, their opinions, their morals, their customs, &c. Of this the following is a striking example.

Catharine II. appointed him to the command of the 60,000 men which she was sending to the support of the Emperor upon the Rhine, when the project was defeated by the death of the Princess. The Marshal immediately assembled round his head quarters the troops destined for that expedition. The different regiments passed successively in parade every day. He read to the soldiers those little instructions drawn up by himself in a clear, simple style, fitted to the minds of the Russian soldiery and the object of the projected expedition. They turned upon the duties of a soldier, and those things which, as a warrior, it was indispensible for him to know.—He there introduced facts, anecdotes, maxims, well selected, and dexterously calculated to inspire them with the utmost horror for the atrocious principles of the French Revolutionists and an extreme ardor to fight against them. He never let slip an opportunity of inculcating those sentiments. When he exercised these troops, either in regiment or corps, it was the French Republicans they were taught they were to face; and they were the objects of all their attacks, all their manœuvres, and against whom all their shots were to be aimed, and all their bayonets pointed. All this produced so great an effect upon the army that the very name of the French Republican, became, as it were mechanically, the signal for battle.

Convinced of the truth of that celebrated maxim—"Principles pro victoria pugnant comites pro Principe.—"Princes fight for glory, and soldiers for their Prince"—he particularly applied himself to gaining the affection of the troops; in which he perfectly succeeded. He follows his army on horseback; and if he sees a soldier fatigued, he puts him on his horse and marches himself on foot. He takes pleasure in sometimes eating out of a woden bowl; and if he finds there a supper to his taste, he manifests his satisfaction by giving the servant who attends, some golden pieces, which are divided among the rest of the cooks, to drink the health of the General In his familiar conversation with his soldiers, the anecdotes which he relates with simplicity, serve to animate, to give them a high opinion of themselves, and to inspire them with great confidence in their leaders; and the confidence with which he has inspired them has been one of the causes of that brilliant and uninterrupted series of success which signalized his military career. He has been in all the wars in which Russia has been engaged for these forty years past, and was engaged in more battles than any other warrior of the present day. In most of them he possessed the chief command and throughout, has never experienced any reverse of fortune. It would be difficult to find in the annals of history, an example of a General who made so many assaults, carried so many strong and well-defended places, and gained so many battles.

Some superficial people having remarked in Suwarrow, a certain originality of character, a singularity of manners, much simplicity in the form of discourse, a great respect for religion, and for old opinions, customs, and usages, have disputed his rare qualities of military genius, and would attribute his constant successes to the mere effect of luck. Certainly constant luck is a thing rather marvellous. Of that matter we may judge by the following trait.

Catharine II. weary of seeing the prolongation of the late war in Poland, ordered Marshall SUWARROW to enter that country at the head of 15,000 Russians, stationed on the Duiester. He no sooner began his march than he was informed that the King of Prussia had quitted the polish territory with his army, in order to suppress some growing insurrections in his own states. Thus reduced to his own troops only, he formed the design of accelerating his march, and striking some sudden blow before the enemy could know the number of Russians, or the latter be acquainted with the obstacles they had to surmount. What appears incredible, but is nevertheless true, he made his little army traverse a space of more than four hundred English miles in ten days, arrived under the walls of Warsaw, quickly reconnoitered the positions of the enemy, instantly formed his plan of attack, distributed his orders, and in a few moments the fate Warsaw was decided, the war terminated, &c. &c.

To this instance we might add, that of his having, with a handful of men, beaten and entirely routed the numerous army commanded by Price Oginsky, at the time of his first confederacy, and that of his having completely defeated, with 10,000 men, the army of the Grand Vizier. What gained him the great reputation he enjoys amongst the Austrian troops and, an infinity of other actions more or less remarkable, is due to his genius and talents, which vulgar observers are pleased to put to the accounts of chance.

The Court De Suwarrow passes for a superstitious man—1st, because he possesses much piety—2dly, because he avails himself of all these events, to which the vulgar attach some preternatural idea, in order to excite confidence in the soldiers. A wolf, or other animal, which might cause a sensation in his army, by crossing it—a tree blown down, or struck with lightning, in sight of his troops—any extraordinary appearances in the air, or in the heavens, which might give uneasiness to his troops, are so many circumstances upon which he seizes with promptitude and address, for the purpose of drawing some favourable augury. This pretended superstition is one of the characteristics of great men. It was that of William the Conqueror, who, sitting down on his first landing in England, immediately substituted confidence for that terror, and with the circumstance inspired his army, by exclaiming—"It is to the possession of this land that I now embrace and clasp it with both my arms"

LAW REPORT.

Court of King's Bench, April 18.

Mr. Attorney General moved for the judgment of the Court on John Cuthell, Bookseller, in Middlerow, Holborn, who was convicted before Lord Kenyon and a Special Jury, at the Sittings after last Term for Westminster, of publishing a Libel. (Mr. Gilbert Wakefield's Reply to the Bishop of Llandaff's Address to these People of Great Britain.)

After the Libel was read by the proper officer, and after the Lord Chief Justice had reported the evedence given at the trial, Mr. Erskine, on the pare of the Defendant, made an excellent speech in mitigation of punishment.

Mr. Attorney General, on the part of the Crown, then stated the motives which had induced him to institute these prosecutions against the Publishers as well as the Author of that publication. He also expressed an anxiety that a mild sentence should be pronounced on the Defendant, though he observed it was unnecessary for him to express that anxiety, as the Court never failed to take into their consideration every circumstance of mitigation, and to allow it its full weight.

Lord Kenyon said, the Court could not on the sudden weigh all the arguments that had been used. In the interim the Defendant must be committed to the King's Bench Prison. They wished to bring him up to receive the judgment of the Court the earliest day they could. It was impossible, as the business of the Court was arranged, that could be earlier than next Wednesday.

Mr. Attorney General next moved for the judgment of the Court on the Rev. Mr. G. Wakefield, who was convicted as the Author of the Libel entitled a Reply to the Bishop of Landaff, on the same day that Mr. Cuthell was found guilty of publishing it.

After the Lord Chief Justice had reported the evidence given at the trial, Mr. Wakefield said, he had no Counsel, and then read a speech upwards of an hour long in mitigation of punishment.

After a few words by way of reply from Mr. Attorney General, the Lord Chief Justice said, the Defendant must be committed to the King's Bench Prison, and brought up on the first Thursday in the next Term (30th of May.)

NEW-YORK, June 14.

Yesterday afternoon, as the several companies of the first battallion of Artillery were forming for review, information came that the Prisoners of the State Prison were forcing the gates, and making their escape. The companies formed instantly, marched out to the Prison on the run, and were soon followed by many other uniformed companies and a great collection of citizens.

The tumult was, however, quelled before their arrival—We have not been able to obtain the particulars—but are told, that the Insurrection was begun by the Shoemakers, who gave a signal to the Blacksmiths to secure the Keepers. When this was effected, they all attacked the gates, with iron bars and other implements. As soon as the affair was discovered, some ladders were placed against the wall without, and three pieces of fire arms discharged among the prisoners, one of whom is badly wounded in the head—They then submitted.

The brig Betsey, captain Watson, arrived at this port yesterday, in 39 days from Belfast. We hear she brings intelligence to the first of May, which we expect to procure this morning. We have been favored with files of "The Belfast News Letter," to the 26th of April. They are filled principally with details of victory on the part of the combined powers, over the Republican armies; debates of the Irish parliament on the Regency bill; and minutes of trials for treasonable practices. The question of Union is seldom mentioned in these papers; but we notice that in the English House of Peers, on the 11th April Lord Grenville introduced a motion, which was carried without a division, that "the resolutions agreed to relative to an incorporated Union with Ireland, might be presented to the King; in order that the same might be laid before the parliament of Ireland, at such time as he shall judge it expedient."

The disturbances in Ireland have ceased to be formidable to the government. The spirit of opposition though not entirely quelled, shews itself only in small marauding parties; but these are guilty of many excesses, in destroying the cattle, burning the houses, and inflicting severe corporeal punishment on the persons of those who have rendered themselves obnoxious. This last outrage is committed on the Lex Talionis, the government having carried the whipping system to a very great height, for the purpose of producing confessions favorable to its interests. This practice is now generally discountenaced, since the cause which introduced it is removed; and the Court of Judicature at Clonmel has fined a Mr. Fitzgerald, who was high sheriff of Tipperary, the sum of 500l for exercising a severity of this kind on a teacher of the French language.

The news respecting the Austrian and French armies has been already published from papers received at Boston.

Captain Watson left Belfast on the 4th of May. He has brought with him 171 passengers, mostly people of respectability, and his vessel is now performing quarantine off Governor's Island agreeably to a regulation of the Board of Health.

At the time the Peggy sailed Flax Seed was four guineas, and rather dull.

The captain of a French privateer, who boarded captain Watson, took his latest papers. [Merc. Adv.

FROM THE FRENCH PAPERS.

ARMY OF ITALY.

Dessolles, General of Brigade, commanding a division of the left wing of the army of Italy, writes, on the 6th Germinal (March 26) from the head-quarters at Maltz, in the Tyrolese, that on the 25th March he attacked the enemy at day break. The force consisted of 7000 men, posted behind formidable entrenchments, on which 18 pieces of cannon were mounted. Dessolles had only 4500 men, and two three pounders; he, however, carried the entrenchments, and the enemy were every where completely defeated.

The result of this battle was, 1200 Austrians killed, 4500 prisoners, and 18 pieces of cannon, with their waggons, harnessing, &c. taken. Gen. Laudohn was only able to save himself, by escaping through the mountains, with 300 men of the army of Wales. We have lost 60 men killed, and have about 200 wounded. Gen. Dessolles testifies the greatest regret, on account of the little town of Glurentz, situated on the left side of the Adige, having been totally burned down. The cause of this accident is not known.

At six in the evening Gen. Dessolles received dispatches from Gen. Loison, which informed him that Gen. Lecourbre had penetrated to Nauders, after having taken 3000 prisoners, and seven pieces of cannon.

This intelligence is submitted to the Executive Directory by Gen. Scherer.

LEGHORN, March 27.

The French troops took possession of this city and harbor on the 24th March, after disarming all the Tuscan soldiers. The tree of liberty was planted on the grand parade, and in the evening there was a splendid illumination. Next morning an English ship of war appeared off the harbor, and sent on shore one of her boats which has been detained, and her crew have been sent prisoners to the Lazaretto. The ship soon after put to sea.

Orders were issued on the same day to take down from all the public buildings the arms of the grand duke, and to deface all armorial bearings on the houses of noblemen or private persons.

Gen. Miolles, who commands here, has published the following orders.

The General of the French troops garrisoned in Leghorn commands all the French emigrants residing here to leave the city and port in the space of twenty-four hours; and if in the course of two days rom the date of this order there shall be found any who have disobeyed it, they will incur the punishment to which they are liable by the laws of France and will be instantly shot.

(Signed) MIOLLES.

Leghorn, 4th Germinal, 24th March.

The consul of the French Republic at Leghorn will put seals upon all the property belonging to England or English merchants, the subjects of the Emperor, the Grand Seignior, the Emperor of Russia, the Queen of Portugal, the States of Barbary, and in fine of all the Potentates and subjects of the powers with whom the republic is at war.

The necessary measures shall be taken to discover and procure the surrender of all the articles subject to the preceding order which may be in the possession of merchants or private individuals of Leghorn.

Rewards will be given to such as assist in the necessary searches.

(Signed) MIOLLES.

The following memorial from the board of health was this day presented to the mayor of this city:

To JAMES CALHOUN,

MAYOR of the CITY of BALTIMORE.

The memorial of the subscribers, constituting the present Board of Health,

Respectfully represent,

That whereas, by ordinance, it is made the duty of this board to watch over the health of the city, and to prevent as much as possible the introduction and spreading of contagious diseases amongst the inhabitants; and having heard with regret, that a late ordinance has passed the different branches of the council, extending the limited time for theatrical exhibitions, which circumstance, we are of opinion, will endanger the health of the city, as it is obvious that the collecting great crowds of people on such occasions, at this advanced season of the year, has a direct tendency to produce diseases, and frequently sudden deaths are occasioned thereby—We therefore think it our duty to represent, that if the said ordinance should be carried into effect, we cannot do otherwise than hold ourselves released from the responsibility attached to the duties of our appointment—for without the aid of the corporation and our fellow citizens, it will not be in our power to render that service required of us by the ordinance under which we act.

NORFOLK, June 8.

A London paper of April 3, observes, "If any circumstance could make the chance of war between France and America more certain, it would be the number of captures of American ships written down in Lloyd's book of yesterday, and which were noticed in our Plymouth letter yesterday."

The same paper says, "A further armament is coming down the Baltic from Petersburg, to aid the genral operations of the campaign against the enemy."

FRENCH CAPTURES.

Carried into Bourdeaux, April 1.

Charles, Lee, New-York, now under trial.
Union, Hunt, Newbury-Port, do.
Pallas, Vernon, Philadelphia, condemned.
Pigou, Sinclair; Lidia, Moore, Portsmouth, both taken and cast away on the Olives.
Stockport, Towns, of Boston, John, ——, of Norfolk, taken but not arrived.
Joanna, Boggs, of Philadelphia, condemned.
Columbus, Skinner, of N. York, under trial.
Eight other American vessels which had been carried into Bayonne, were condemned as prizes to the captors last month.

Extract from the Log book of the ship Ann, Daniel Cook, master, arrived here on Thursday, in 14 days from New-Providence.

"On Sunday, May 4, in lat. 34. 22, long. 73,0, blowing heavy from N. N. W. at 10 P. M. discovered a vessel bottom up—she appeared to be a pilot boat.

"May 27, in lat, 28. 8, long. 75, 48, brought too by his Majesty's ship Greyhound captain Crawly, who informed me the schooner then in company was a Spanish prize from La Vera Cruz, bound to the Havanna, with 39 boxes, containing eleven hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

We can yet learn (says the New York Commercial Advertiser) nothing further concerning the ship ONTARIO, as reported. From this circumstance, and from the non-arrival of the supercargo, who was expected to reach town on Monday or Tuesday, we are led to hope the story is not well founded, and that the owners and the public may yet experience the agreeable surprize of seeing her enter port in safety.

The Spanish government of the Caraccas, it appears by recent accounts, have ordered the departure of all our vessels in eight days. At the same time, in a manner the most indecorus and insulting, the Agents of that Nation are prohibiting by proclamations in our own newspapers, the principal part of our trade with them, to the great distress of numerous adventurers to their possessions, and the entire ruin of many.

It was not enough that we should be trodden upon by the Sansculottes themselves; no, to heighten our humiliations, even their very servants must be ordered to spurn at us. As Don Pedro can have no very explicit demands against us, on the score of gratitude, some old fashioned kind of people think it time to set about enquiring where the line of submission to such unparrelled degradations of the national honor is to end, and where the line of resistance is to begin. It is time we had enquired on the banks of the Oronoko, Amazon, and La Plata, "what is the meaning of all this?"

The Editor of the Aurora has stated with tears in his eyes, that 300 of the Irish emigrants have been shipped off to Russia, to serve as soldiers. He would have preferred, so much does he love liberty, that these United Irishmen, had been permitted to encrease the corps of Patriots in the United States, for which he is now actually beating up for recruits. It happens however, that the sober, industrious, and well attached to government, to the preservation of internal tranquility and external consideration, do not think with this Editor, that the United States would have been benefitted by such an importation, and therefore wish them a safe passage to their place of destination, whether they are to encrease the Prussian or Russian armies.

The samples we have had, of the principles of some recently imported Irishmen, and their enmity to our government, even before they could have known any thing of its operations, or effects, must induce an earnest desire in every good citizen to deprecate the further importation of such patriots.

A Seeker of Repose, means, a fomenter of insurrection; A United Irishman, a man bound by the most sacred oath, to destroy the American Government, and establish the French power in the United States, upon the ground, that by doing so, he will weaken England, and thereby facilitate the Independence of Ireland. Can it be cause of grief in the United States, to learn, that three hundred of your seekers of repose have been lately enlisted by a Prussian officer, to serve, perhaps, against France, instead of being permitted to find their way into the United States?

Every kind of device that can be thought of by your exclusive patriots, is brought into action against the government. One day we are told, by way of encouraging us to submit to France, that because the price of funded stock fluctuates, according to the rate of exchange, the scarcity or plenty of money at market, the demand for it in foreign countries, and such like causes, it follows, that public credit is nearly at an end, and that the United States are on the precipice of a Bankruptcy: and the next, that the army and navy are to beget loans, loans taxes, and that taxes are to be perpetual.

A letter received in this city from London, dated April 27, informs, that the Archduke Charles, after meeting with such signal advantages over the French, had crossed the Rhine and penetrated into Switzerland, as far as Basle, where he had his head quarters, to which the Swiss in great numbers were rallying

We cannot vouch for the authenticity of this account. It is, however, mentioned with the fullest confidence, and has for its authority, one of the most respectable houses in London.

Extract of a letter from Capt. William Penrose, master of the schooner Skjold Brand, (one of the Algerine fleet) to his friend in this city, received by the brig Rover, capt. Stubbs, in 63 days from Lisbon.

ALGIERS, FEB. 17, '99.

"I have met with an opportunity of informing you of my arrival at this port, by a Swedish frigate, which put in here last night. I had a very good passage from the Delaware, though a very wet one, being perfectly under water all the time. We made the run in 30 days, which was 10 days less than capt. Maley, 5 days less than capt. Smith, and 6 days less than capt. Geddes; and was fortunate enough to fall in with no cruisers that we were afraid of. In the Streights of Gibraltar, 6 large gun-boats rowed off to us in a calm, under French and Spanish colors; but after firing a few shot, they thought it prudent to retire. They then went and attacked two large ships and a schooner, about 6 miles from us—we were then laying becalmed: one of the ships and the schooner they took, but the other ship got clear, which proved to be the Five Brothers, capt. Phillips, of and from Boston, bound to Leghorn, carrying 12 six pounders and 40 men. Capt. Philips informed me that the ship which had struck was from Boston also, bound to Leghorn, mounting 16 guns, but could not learn the captain's name. The schooner which was captured, was the Experiment, capt. Bender, of and from Philadelphia, bound to Gibraltar. The Algerine fleet which sailed from Philadelphia are all safe arrived, except the ship Hero, capt. Robinson."

Capt. Bell further informs, that the interior part of the Province is in a very disturbed state—The Insurgents there having become very formidable, and, were they in possession of arms and ammunition, would prove very troublesome to government. No expence has been spared in the publication; and I flatter myself that the work does not yield, either in paper or print, to any one ever published in America —— This edition has an advantage over some former ones, as it contains by way of notes, the minor productions of the author; and, it has an advantage over every other edition, in the Poetical Epistle, which is prefixed to it, and which must be extremely gratifying to every lover of literature in this country, as it is a proof that there are Americans who have the taste to admire the justice to applaud, and the talents to rival the Geniuses of other nations.
